Summary

A little something about myself, originally born in Romania, moved to the UK from a young age, wanting a better future, pursuing my dreams and turn them into reality. I first picked up a camera when I was 16, taking pictures of pretty much everything around me, eventually discovered self-portraiture which has been the best thing happening to me. I decided to focus on the connections between the body and mind in relation to my childhood experiences. Photography has helped me overcome these experiences, creating something personal and finding confidence in expressing myself, telling my story and share it with the world. I believe that art is the solution to chaos and for myself speaks out through my work, It helped me through the process of healing, self-development as well as building and shaping my character and making me the person I am today.
